

Paintings 2018–2026

YIĞIT ÖZEN

In Özen's paintings a body appears as rounded units settle on top of one another. The contour arrives late and often does not arrive. Scale gives the verdict. A shape held large enough becomes somebody, and the same shape beside it becomes a row. Most of the ground stays unpainted, and that emptiness decides how far the figure gets to build.

The same parts have been turning up since the beginning. A figure present in the scene and not looking. A chair nobody sits in. A frame drawn over the scene and left open. A bird that arrives under its own power, carrying something never unwrapped. These are working parts. Nothing in them waits to be solved. The one helping and the one crushing are made of the same heap.

Titles do not name the picture. A greeting, a game, a file name, a line taken from elsewhere. They set a second language beside the image and tilt it. Decisions are taken in wet paint, colour is held as a distribution. Over the years the parts stay where they are and the temperature changes.
